In recent years, India is experiencing a rapid economic growth, especially after 1990s when India started to liberalise its economy in full scale. The green revolution in India started in the late 1960s and with its success India attended food self sufficiency within a decade. This first step of green revolution was largely confined to wheat crop resulting in a limited contribution to overall economic development of the country. On the other hand, economic growth in 1980s was the second phase of the green revolution which involved almost all the crops including the rice and other crops and enabled to raise rural income and alleivate rural poverty substantially.

4.　Write the summary of the following passage.　　　　(20 Marks)

　　Knowledge means knowing the things in an appropriate and better way. A man of knowledge can understand the cirumstances more wisely, so can decide the things favourably. Knowledge inspires confidence and courag, to act at the right time. A man of knowledge possesses immense influence in society. He has the capacity to lead the society, mould it in a positive direction, keep away the society from the many social evils. A man of knowledge turns the sleeping people into a thundering force.

　　Time has gone, when power of sword ruled the world. Even during that period, the power of sword alone never ruled, but the knowledge about enemy, knowledge about own strength and knowledge of the right time of attack always had played a crucial role in grabing the power. In other words, knowing what to do at what time in what direction and how, are the various parameters that lead to sure success. Knowing the timings well, knowing our goals well, knowing our strengths and weaknesses well and sharpening them in right direction, we can achieve what we aspire to achieve. Knowledge gives power to mobilise things in right directions and so it is said that knowledge is power.

　　If one ventures to establish any business or wishes to achieve any goal, he must acquire full knowledge of all the things including his own limitations and weaknesses. Knowledge gives one capacity and capability to know the result of his actions, probability of success and failure, propriety of his venture and so knowledge is said to be the power.

　　For a country knowledge about its friends and foes, knowledge about the capabilites of his enemies is very important. In the present world scenario, many satellites and spy air crafts are deployed for the purpose of gaining maximum knowledge of activities going on in other countries. A country having maximum and accurate knowledge of other countries can use them for its advantage; it is the 'knowledge' that rules the world. Knowledge gives one immense power, so rightly said, 'Knowledge is power'
